From People to Plans: Celebrating Connection and Community

As I look back on this year, I'm reminded of what fuels my passion for architecture: people. I came into this profession driven by a curiosity for how things come together and a desire to make a difference, but I've since realized that the most meaningful aspect of this journey is the connections we make. This year, as President of AIA Northern Virginia, I've had the privilege of meeting, supporting, and collaborating with so many of you. Our network of architects, mentors, and friends in this chapter forms a vibrant, resilient community that strengthens us all.

Two recent events reinforced the importance of these connections. First, I had the pleasure of attending ArchEx in Richmond, where I was energized by catching up
